A Place to Start

For those faced with a loved one's homosexuality, this is a place to begin learning, healing and growing. A resource of this length cannot provide all the information you will need for dealing with a difficult issue like homosexuality in the family, but it is a great place to start. We've done our best to pack into it as much help, information and guidance as possible.

And while this resource is geared toward parents, we trust that spouses and friends of gay-identified men and women will be able to glean some helpful guidance, as well. This resource also has many links to online articles for friends and spouses.

As you read, you will find brief vignettes from those with a gay-identified child; goals and guidelines for maintaining a relationship with your child; information on grief, recovery and building a support network; stories from those who have left homosexuality; and links to other helpful resources.

We trust God will use this resource to bring hope, healing, comfort and encouragement as you travel this road with your loved one.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."
—Psalm 46:1 (ESV)

HOMOSEXUALITY IN THE CULTURE TODAY

A 2015 study from the United Kingdom found that almost half of the 18-to-24-year-olds surveyed do not identify as “heterosexual.”¹ That’s right; 49 percent of the young adults in the poll placed themselves somewhere on the scale where homosexuality was an option. Another study by the same group found that in the U.S., almost one-third of young Americans don’t define themselves as “100-percent heterosexual.”²

We live in a time where “sexual fluidity” and the celebration of homosexuality are commonplace. There are many reasons for this, including:

- Almost 50 years of “gay pride” activism.
- The shift in our culture’s thinking about sex and sexuality—what used to be sexual activity has now become an identity.³
- The “sexual revolution” and its fallout: increased promiscuity; family breakdown; increased sexuality in entertainment; and easy access to pornography.
- Our societal rebellion against authority and rejection of absolute truth.
- The promotion of homosexuality and a variety of “gender identities” in our children’s education.

So, it’s not surprising there’s a large upswing in teens and young adults identifying—to some degree—as homosexual or bisexual.

One thing these studies also indicate: Homosexuality has a strong cultural component. If people were “born gay,” we would not see such a large increase, in such a short timespan, in identification as homosexual or bisexual.⁴

WHEN HOMOSEXUALITY HITS HOME

For Christians, this means we are more likely to see young people—in our schools, ministries, churches and families—questioning their sexuality, turning away from a biblical sexual ethic and “coming out” as gay, lesbian or bisexual. However, we should keep in mind a couple of key factors. Many population studies show a drift away from homosexuality back to opposite-sex relationships over time.⁵ And for adolescents, especially, many of those who experience same-sex attractions or question their identity are likely to shift back toward opposite-sex attractions and a heterosexual identity.⁶

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

“What can we say to our teenage son who just announced to us he’s gay? I’m devastated by this revelation.”

When faced with a child's homosexual attractions, behavior or identity, one of the first things we suggest parents carefully think through is what they want to accomplish.

DALLAS WILLARD

"Jesus offers Himself as God's doorway into the life that is truly life. Confidence in Him leads us today, as in other times, to become His apprentices in eternal living. 'Those who come through me will be safe,' He said. 'They will go in and out and find all they need. I have come into their world that they may have life, and life to the limit.'"⁷

WHAT IS YOUR DESIRE FOR YOUR CHILD?

As you consider your loved one's situation, what is it you would like to see happen? What are your goals? What would you like God to do?

Certainly, it would be good if your son or daughter turned away from homosexuality, didn't identify as gay anymore or stopped acting out sexually. But what if they walked away from homosexuality and never became a child of God? What if they began having opposite-sex relationships but never became a follower of Christ? What about those who believe Christianity and homosexuality are compatible?

Our desire should be greater: We want our loved ones to come to Christ for salvation and to follow Him. We want them to experience Christ's life. However, this is something we can't make happen. You can't force faith and salvation on your child. So what are reasonable, achievable goals for a parent?

At Focus on the Family, when people call and speak with our counseling staff, we suggest two goals to work toward: Maintain a relationship and maintain a godly influence with your son or daughter.

Here are just a few reasons we think these are good goals to work toward:

- It's important for parents to relate to their children with both grace and truth. Grace offers forgiveness and demonstrates love, just as Jesus did when He interacted with people. Truth affirms we are made in God's image, but we are desperately fallen, and we have redemption available through Christ. Both grace and truth are needed for healthy change, growth and relationships.⁸
- God's Word does not advise us to approve and celebrate homosexuality but clearly teaches God's design for our relationships, sexuality and marriage.⁹

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

"How can I talk to my children about homosexuality?"

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1FLbAXP

- At the same time, God's Word calls us to follow Jesus' example, reaching out with love to those caught in sin.
- Trying to fix, control or change loved ones doesn't work. In fact, it may push them away from us.
- Your child may have been struggling with homosexual attractions, behaviors and identity for years. It will take you time, as well, to understand his or her thoughts, feelings, and beliefs, and build a deeper relationship with your child.

Of course, if your child is still a minor and in your home, you may set boundaries on behavior and respond appropriately to disobedience, but that's very different from trying to fix or change them. In addition, if you have safety concerns about your teen, you might need to take a different action. In all cases, communicate your love and concern.

RESTORING THE RELATIONSHIP

Here are some ideas for building, restoring or maintaining a relationship with a loved one:

- Demonstrate Love. As Scripture teaches, we must love others with our actions and our words. Model sacrificial love. Tell them, "I love you as you are. I will always love you. This does not change my love for you."
- Affirm and Connect. You might say things like, "Thank you for sharing this with me" or "I want to know you and relate to you, so I'm glad you told me about this area of your life."
- Listen and Ask Questions. Pause, learn and work to understand them. Go slowly and ask permission to ask more questions. "I know it's not easy to talk to parents about sexual thoughts or behaviors, so I appreciate you telling me. When you're ready, could we talk more about this?"
- Give Yourself Time. Say something like, "Wow. This is really a surprise to me, but it's something you've been dealing with for a while. Could you give me time to think and pray about this? And at some point, may I ask you more questions?"
- If You've Already Reacted. If you have tried to control or manipulate your adult son or daughter or responded in anger, follow what Scripture teaches: Confess to God and to the one you've sinned against. Humbly repent and ask for forgiveness. Seek the Lord for change, healing, and restoration of the relationship.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

"Can you help us figure out how to respond to our grown son who just informed us he's a homosexual?"

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1IYUpwE

- Don’t Make This Issue the Focal Point of Relationship with Your Child. See beyond their homosexuality. Would you enjoy it if people only related to you at the point of your struggle with sin?
- View This as an Opportunity to Deepen Intimacy with Your Child. The fact he or she has disclosed this to you allows you to know more about your son or daughter’s experience. It removes barriers they had in place. “I’m so glad we’ve spoken about this. I’d rather know what you’re going through than not know.”

In addition to the above points, we strongly encourage you not to label your children as “gay,” “lesbian,” “bisexual” or even “homosexual.” Words are powerful and have an impact; labeling someone pushes them toward that identity. Instead, we suggest being intentional about differentiating between the many components of human sexuality, including thoughts, romantic and sexual feelings, behaviors, and identity.

Our world today says, “I feel it; therefore, I must be it and act on it.” In sharp contrast, the Bible talks about homosexual lust and behavior but not about homosexuality as an identity.

PRAYERS AVAIL MUCH

Maintaining a godly influence with your son or daughter includes some of the skills and attitudes we’ve mentioned above; however, the most important thing you can do is pray:

- Pray that the “Hound of Heaven” will pursue your loved one relentlessly.
- Pray that your loved one will become aware of the consequences of sin, so he or she can be led to a change of heart. Remember, God’s ultimate goal is not punishment, but repentance, and His kindness leads us toward it.
- Pray your heart will remain open to your loved one so you can be a channel of God’s grace. Watch this redemptive story of a wife and mother, Nancy Heche, who faced homosexuality in her husband and daughter.¹⁰
- Pray that God will continue to work in your mind, heart and life, so your prayers can become even more powerful and effective in your loved one’s life.

Even goals like this aren’t fully attainable on our own. The reality is some children cut off relationships with their parents, whether out of rebellion, anger, fear or some other reason. Our hearts grieve with those who experience this loss. For those parents: Even as you pray for the chance to restore the relationship, you still have the opportunity to maintain a godly influence—through the power of prayer.

A MOTHER'S PRAYERS

"My mother began to pray a bold prayer: 'Lord, do whatever it takes to bring this prodigal son to you.' For seven years, she fasted every Monday, and once fasted 39 days for me. As my situation became more and more bleak, she immersed herself deeper into God's Word. My mother spent hours each morning in her prayer closet reading her Bible and interceding for others. In addition, she stepped out of her comfort zone and began to minister to other women as a Bible Study Fellowship discussion group leader. Her obedience and transparency in service was essential for her own healing.

"Like the persistent widow, my mother kept bombarding heaven with her desperate pleas. She knew it would take nothing short of a miracle to bring this prodigal son to the Father. The answer came one day with a knock on my door. It was 12 Drug Enforcement Administration agents, Atlanta police, and 2 German Shepherd dogs. They confiscated a shipment equivalent to the street value of 9.1 tons of marijuana. Sitting in jail, I quickly realized who my true friends were when no one accepted my collect calls. As a last resort, I dialed home, dreading the response on the other side as I imagined the earful that I was going to get. But my mother's first words were, "Son, are you okay?"¹¹

INVEST IN YOUR OWN RECOVERY AND SUPPORT

You hear this potentially life-saving message before taking off on an airplane:

"It's unlikely; but if cabin pressure changes, the panels above your seat will open, revealing oxygen masks. If this happens, reach up and pull the mask toward you until the tube is fully extended. Place the mask over your nose and mouth, slip the elastic strap over your head and adjust the mask, if necessary. Breathe normally and know that oxygen is flowing; so don't worry if the bag doesn't inflate. Be sure to adjust your own mask before helping others."¹²

The airline emergency message also applies to life on the ground: Secure your own "oxygen mask" first, before trying to help your son or daughter. If you are rendered helpless, you will be unable to help your child. When dealing with a serious issue like a son or daughter's homosexuality, it's vital that you first get help and support for yourself.

If you are unsure about your own faith, unable to trust God, fearful about the future, disconnected from others, struggling with sexual sins of your own, or unable to receive help from others, how can you possibly help a son or daughter who identifies as gay, lesbian or bisexual?

The goal is to release your child to God and focus on your own spiritual, emotional, mental and physical health. Here are a few important ways you can find strength, comfort and solid ground for yourself as you are navigating your relationship with your child:

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

"How do we cope with the emotional impact of our son's recent revelation that he considers himself gay?"

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1UHSLGo

- Connect With God. It's important that you maintain your relationship with God: Pray and listen, read Scripture, worship, spend time with the Father and cry out to Him.
- Connect With the Body of Christ. You are not alone in the church—there are other parents of prodigals, too. Work at building a support network. Find safe people who will listen to you, comfort and pray with you. Guilt and shame cause us to separate from others. Pride is often the flipside of shame, causing us to worry about “what others will think” and making us afraid to “impose” on others. Men, especially, may find it difficult to ask for help and to connect with others. Push through any guilt, shame or pride, and work at deepening your own relationships.
- Find Professional or Pastoral Support and Counsel. Please be careful, as there are wolves in sheep's clothing. Many therapists and some clergy (and churches and denominations, too) have revised their views of God, Scripture, and sexuality, and now approve of homosexual relationships. Ask the therapist or pastor what they believe about the Bible, sexuality and homosexuality. If you were buying a car or house, you would ask a lot of questions and do your research. Think about how much more important this is: You're putting your soul into another person's care. Be prepared with a list of questions and beware of “gay-affirming” therapists. If you need help finding a mental health professional, check out our list at Focus on the Family, and confirm their views, too.
- Get Equipped. Learn About This Issue. There are many resources available today that were unavailable 40 years ago. We have a number of articles and a complete resource list available at Focus on the Family. Here are three good books, just for starters: Someone I Love is Gay, by Anita Worthen and Bob Davies; Ann Mobley's If I Tell You I'm Gay, Will You Still Love Me? and When Homosexuality Hits Home: What to Do When a Loved One Says, I'm Gay, by Joe Dallas.
- Cling to Faith and Hope. God is powerful, loving and good. Remember this and meditate on God's character, and know that salvation comes from His goodness, not our own (or our loved ones). Our hope and faith are in Him.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

“How do we break the news to our friends and extended family that our oldest son now self-identifies as a homosexual?”

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1iepozH

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

“Should we allow our adult son to bring his same-sex partner to family gatherings?”

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1V0d0cQ

Remember, too, that mothers and fathers deal with emotional issues differently and find support in different ways. Acknowledge the differences and allow each other that freedom. Men usually have fewer people to talk to about deep issues and may have fewer connections. Fathers may need more time to develop a solid support network. This is not a time to retreat, but a time for men to reach out for the information and connection they need.

A MOTHER'S STORY

Ann Mobley writes in her book, If I Tell You I'm Gay, Will You Still Love Me?

"Make it your first priority to strengthen your own personal relationship with God through time in His Word and in prayer. You will need His guidance, wisdom, strength, direction, encouragement, perseverance and hope for this journey."

Let God reveal to you your own sins and faults, and honestly deal with them when He does.¹³

NAVIGATING GRIEF AND LOSS

For Christian parents, learning a son or daughter is struggling with homosexuality can be extremely painful and confusing. Christians who know God's design for sexuality, relationships and marriage understand that homosexual behavior falls outside that design and is a grievous sin. We want the best for our children, and we believe identifying as gay and becoming involved in same-sex relationships is harmful and damaging.

In addition, here are some other reasons parents may struggle deeply with their child's disclosure:

- Homosexuality—being gay—often becomes the person's entire identity.
- Those who embrace a gay identity may abandon biblical beliefs and values they once held dear.
- Some Christians mistakenly see this as the worst sin possible.
- People mistakenly believe "being lesbian" or "being gay" is inborn and unchangeable.
- Parents often feel responsible for their children and their children's choices.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

"What should we say to our college-age son who claims to be a 'gay Christian?'"

■ CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT bit.ly/1JULm0S

A FATHER'S STORY

"Mark, I hesitated, not knowing just how to ask; then I blurted out, "Mark, are you involved with other men?" For a moment Mark was too embarrassed to look at us directly; then quietly said, "Dad, Mom, I must tell you now that I am gay." His answer was not offered in pride; actually, he almost seemed to cringe.

"Our hearts fell. Until a few days earlier, we had no suspicion, whatsoever, that this was the case. Furiously, the questions raced through our minds. How could our son, so active in his Christian witness only a few weeks before, suddenly reject the clear teaching of Scripture? Who had seduced him? What kind of a person was he? Where had we failed him? Had we not reared him to be God fearing? Why Mark? Why? Why?"¹⁴

Please know grief is an appropriate, God-given response to loss, pain, sin or hurt. We feel grief when we love someone and see them harmed. Or we grieve when we see them sin, because we understand that sin is destructive. We grieve when we have lost something. It's part of our God-given makeup. We know God grieves over loss, pain, sin or hurt, because He loves us so deeply.

In our grief, God calls us to reach out to others and be comforted. The Apostle Paul tells us in Second Corinthians that God is the "God of all comfort." Paul says that because God has comforted him, he is able to pass on that comfort to others.

We are not designed to grieve alone: Grief is designed to propel us into connections with other people and with God. When you've lost something or someone—and you're grieving—there's been a disconnection, a broken relationship. Grieving and receiving comfort, from God and others, allows us to strengthen existing connections or build new ones, as we deepen relationships with those who empathize and care for us.

One concept that may help you is the "five stages of grief." If you're not familiar with this analysis of grief, we have an article that explains the stages. In addition, here are more concepts to help you navigate this process:

- Grief Doesn't Just Go Away Over Time. People may be stuck in grief or have unresolved grief. Receiving comfort and connecting with others helps people move on to healing. Isolation keeps grief inside, unresolved and un comforted. God made us to need Him and other people and to be in deep relationship with Him and others. We need people who support us, listen to us, comfort us, grieve with us and encourage us.
- This Is Not an Orderly Process or a Neat Progression. The reality is the grieving process is messy. Someone might move back and forth between stages, skip some or repeat them. You may think you've reached "acceptance and resolution," only to be pitched back into anger or depression again.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Can I talk to a Focus on the Family counselor?

■ [CLICK FOR THE ANSWER OR VISIT \[bit.ly/1XMNTEg\]\(http://bit.ly/1XMNTEg\)](#)

- Grief From Today Sometimes Taps Into Grief From the Past. You may even find memories and pain coming up from seemingly unrelated events in your life.
- Some People Get Stuck in This Process. You might need help from a godly, experienced Christian counselor.
- Men and Women May Handle Grief Differently. Spouses may experience and manage their emotions, thoughts and relationships in very different ways.
- Adults and Children Respond to Grief in Different Ways. Children impacted by homosexuality need help to deal with their questions, fears, and grief. They don't always have words for what they are feeling. It's important for adults to come alongside and assist them in this process.

Thankfully, there are many resources available to help parents through this process, including support groups, books, videos, and counselors. We have a helpful online list, with numerous links.

A MOTHER'S JOURNEY

"Ten years ago, my 18-year-old son told us he was gay. That rocked my world beyond anything I've ever experienced. Shock, fear, and grief ravaged our family. I called Focus on the Family the next day and spoke to a counselor there. That was the first step in getting the support and guidance needed to sustain the faith journey that is still ongoing for my son. Thank you – you were there for me when I needed you most!"

HOPE FOR THE FUTURE

As noted earlier, our strongest desire for our children is that they come to the Lord and follow Him.

Be encouraged! There are many who once embraced a homosexual identity, only to find it didn't satisfy the deepest longings of their heart.

Many return to the Christian faith. Some come to Christ for the very first time and, as they grow in faith, they seek to follow God's design for their sexuality and relationships—whether through chastity in singleness or through marriage to a spouse of the opposite sex.

AN OVERCOMER'S STORY

Tom Cole, now happily married with four children, remembers how the witness of a Christian co-worker changed the whole direction of his life. He was 26 at the time and had been involved in dozens of gay relationships since the age of 19. He was desperate and lonely.

Then he met a woman named Rosie, a waitress at the restaurant where Tom was a cook. Tom was flagrant about his homosexuality, and Rosie was equally outspoken about her Christian faith.

One night as she was leaving work to go home, Rosie told Tom, “My husband and I will be praying for you.”

Tom was shocked. “You pray for me?”

“Yes,” Rosie said, “We pray for you every night.” As she went out the door, she added, “Tom, I love you. I just want you to know that I love you.”

Tom recalls the impact of her words:

“The words ripped my heart open. I knew she was speaking the truth. I knew she loved me. All the years of hurt and pain and hardness were suddenly broken open. The wall I had erected in my heart was blasted down. I began to cry as the realization of what she’d said hit me. I ducked under the counter so she couldn’t see me crying. I knew at that moment that whatever it was she had, I wanted it too.”

Several weeks later, Tom went to church with Rosie and her husband and accepted Christ. They disciplined Tom as a new believer. His early days as a Christian were not without serious challenges, Tom admits:

“They saw me stumble and fall and then watched God pick me back up. They saw me come to Bible study and prayer meetings at their home drunk or high. But through it all, they walked with me; they prayed for me; they showed me God’s truth in Scripture. I would not be alive today if it weren’t for the witness of this beautiful woman in Christ.”¹⁵

This is just one of the hundreds of testimonies from men and women who have walked away from homosexual behavior, identity, thoughts and even attractions. Read some of these stories in our series, “Freedom From Homosexuality.”

Turning away from homosexuality is usually not an instantaneous process. When people come to Christ they are not automatically transformed from “gay to straight.” It also does not mean that those who leave homosexuality never again have same-sex attractions.

But redemption is possible, victory over sin is achievable, and men and women are walking away from homosexuality all the time. We also recommend reading the article, “What Do We Mean When We Talk About Change from Homosexuality?”

As you walk this journey with your gay-identified loved one, we pray you will know God’s peace and comfort, remain courageously steadfast in the truth, and know your child will be impacted by Christ’s love demonstrated through you!

“Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation. The old has passed away; behold, the new has come. All this is from God, who through Christ reconciled us to Himself and gave us the ministry of reconciliation.”

2 Corinthians 5:17-18 (ESV)
