

The Better Together Commitment

Understanding that I can do this "mom thing" better with other moms in my life, I will do my best to:

- Stop trying to do life alone
- Find the courage to strike up conversations
- Keep the circle unbroken, always making room for another mom
- Move from passively waiting to actively pursuing friendship
- Stop judging, and start accepting moms who are different from me
- Resist the urge to compare my insides to another mom's outsides
- Remember that I have strengths other moms can benefit from
- Stop offering to help and start helping
- Be Jesus to those around me
- Share my story so another mom can walk through her story
- Pray with and for my friends
- Remember my value is in Christ alone
- Practice forgiveness
- Let another mom peek into my imperfect life
- Encourage other moms whenever I can
- Share with another mom that we are all better together

You have so much to offer the women God has put around you. Your life is designed to intersect with other moms' lives. God longs to connect the dots in ways only He can. May you and I step deeper into the world of mom friendships and discover all the ways we really are better together.
